Materials are for use in the library only, but interlibrary loan is possible for non-fragile items.

The Library

The Hampton Roads Naval Museum Library provides research materials to support the interpretation of the history of the U.S. Navy in and around Hampton Roads. The Library provides materials covering naval history from the earliest days to the present.

The Library contains materials associated with the activities of naval ships and personnel with a connection to the Hampton Roads area as well as general naval and military history.

In addition, the Library collects materials associated with the battleship Wisconsin, and the Jamestown Exhibition of 1907.

The Library is available to the public for research purposes during museum hours when a library staff member is present. The collection is non-circulating and is restricted to room use.

Interlibrary loan of materials to other research libraries is subject to such restrictions and regulations as the librarian shall specify.

The current collection numbers over 2,000 volumes. The Library has recently concluded a contract with SirsiDynex for an online catalog using the Eos.Web software. In the interim, a listing of materials by Library of Congress call number is provided on the website.

Other Resources

In addition to print materials, the library houses an extensive collection of photographs. The library has pictures of Navy ships, past and current, as well as historical photos of Navy activities and people.

In addition to the library located in Nauticus, a large volume of archival material is located in storage on the Norfolk Naval Station.

Included are historical publications, newsletters, and records from other Hampton Roads locations such as Oceana Naval Air Station.
